MProxy (April-2022)

MProxy is a tiny Windows software solution developed to help users quickly change proxy servers. The same thing can be performed using the built-in Windows features, but MProxy makes everything a lot faster and easier, all with the help of a fairly intuitive approach. There are no complex configuration settings and basic technical experience is enough to successfully set up the application. The program supports up to four different proxy servers, so you are required to define them by writing down the IP address and the port of each of them. Once you fill in the empty fields, MProxy provides access to the configured profiles via the System Tray icon. Simply right click this icon and you can enable any of the defined proxy servers on the go. MProxy works with Internet Explorer exclusively, but sadly, it doesn't support newer versions of the popular Microsoft web browser. The program however runs flawlessly on all Windows versions and doesn't hamper the overall system stability or the browsing experience in any way. To sum up, MProxy is a handy product, but the lack of more advanced features could be very frustrating for professional users. Only four different proxy servers are allowed, there's no hotkey support to quickly change the active proxy, Internet Explorer is the only supported browser and the configuration screen only comes down to the proxy profiles you need to define. To explore the effect of lung hyperinflation on diaphragmatic dysfunction in patients with COPD. Thirty patients with COPD and ten healthy controls were enrolled. High-resolution respiratory magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) was performed at the end expiratory state. The volume changes of lower lobe (LL), middle lobe (ML) and upper lobe (UL) were measured. The correlation between pulmonary function test (PFT), image feature (LL, ML, UL), hyperinflation index (LL/UL) and diaphragmatic dysfunction was analyzed. Pulmonary function test showed that there was significantly low lung volume in patients with COPD compared with that in healthy controls. Image feature showed that the LL of patients with COPD increased and ML and UL decreased significantly compared with that of healthy controls. In addition, the LL/UL was positively correlated with $FEV1\%$ (r = 0.676, P
